Supporting Transgender Students

- Youth and adolescents now have greater access to LGBTQ+ resources and community than ever before, and because of this many of them are beginning to step into a clearer understanding of their own identities. This is a vital moment for self-discovery, but often homes, schools, and communities are unprepared to support these students. This interactive session includes activities that explore current terminology, best practices, and strategies for supporting transgender and non-binary youth and young adults.

- Dre Ceja is a Chicanx/Chicane, queer, transgender, and non-binary speaker, facilitator, consultant, and trainer. They studied sociology and gender at California University of Pennsylvania and often focused their honors research around social inequities. Dre is also a certified trainer through the Transgender Training Institute. They currently work as the Director of Training and Education at the LGBT Center of Central PA and as a continuing education instructor at Temple University Harrisburg Campus. Dre is passionate about intersectional social justice and brings these concepts into practice in their work.
